

“The Champion’s Bestiary”

Things We Damn Well Feel Like Saying:

It's a new year for us here at The Plague as we enter this Spring Semester (of 2014). For students returning from break, you're probably around this time of year used to being welcomed by a fresh-printed invective from the Plague team, enumerating the epic fails of the past semester, shortcomings in our generation's moral character, reasons why the stupid crap that everybody is watching on TV sucks, et cetera. Well, as usual, it's time for us to be brutally honest with you: these days, there's not very much of anything that we damn well feel like saying.

That's right. With age has to the minds behind The Plague come a more jaded, more patient, and overall holistic outlook on student affairs. What we have this year is a set of ideas that we encourage you to, instead of performing the same tired show of mass agitation and violence toward public property, contemplate with the sort of quiet respect exemplified by us here at The Plague.

NYU'S FILM PROGRAM SHOULD BE DEACTIVATED

Film students across campus seem to be coming down with the same malaise as that which gave to the works of their favorite auteurs and actresses their modern emotional truth and art world credibility. Several NYU counselors suspect that these students got the idea from watching these movies, noting strong correlations between this behavior, which is damaging to both social health and sexual haveability, and owning more than twenty physical DVDs.

We suggest a strategy of slowly phasing out the works of specific directors from Tisch curricula (Herzog, Korine, Braff and so on until DeVito), before eventually closing off this branch of the school entirely and rerouting those funds (which were probably at one point hard-earned) back to the industrious students in STEM fields, who are truly our future.

NYU'S TINDER OBSESSION: A PROPHYLACTIC SYMPTOM OF VIRULENCE?

Scores of NYU students are rapidly getting down with arranging anonymous sexual hookups through this century's metastasizing communications infrastructure. As one student observed, "I feel like I probably don't value sex very much." The hectic city lifestyle in this, our information era, translates well into technology designed to link one to any of a limitless pool of potential sexual partners. This attitude recalls that of the free love era, the expansion of the sexual network that helped pave the way for AIDS and the eventual prophylactic fear of contamination/the invention of safe sex. French movie critic Jean Baudrillard reads this as a prophylactic effect: the widespread protection from “real” sex.

Similarly, nowadays in 2014, most users at NYU are so inundated with boobs and balls that few are making it past the perusal/masturbation stage of using Tinder. Many have even begun to add the explicit disclaimer, “Just Browsing, thanks,” (including variations such as “very browse. much pic swap”) to their profiles. Is this new adult pastime another step in the direction of mass prophylaxis? [Consider the telling fact that, as every single female Plague staffer can attest, “double-clicking the mouse” is a euphemism for shlicking. --Ed.]

THE SPROUSE TWINS ARE ACTUALLY OUR ACADEMIC EXEMPLARS

These two used to be a big joke, but it seems like 2014 may be their year. Last semester Dylan Sprouse published his first amateur video game while studying at Gallatin: an isometric strategy simulator inspired by the 8-bit aesthetic of old school Nintendo, taking place in a world torn between Lovecraftian terror and cyberpunk pleasure. You can either pay per upgrade or wait a few hours to regenerate Dyldollars, which can be used to buy new buildings and themes.

Meanwhile, Cole Sprouse has been keeping himself busy with his studies in postmodern archaeology, having recently discovered in his backyard a genuine arrowhead. A report on the expedition will be published in the upcoming issue of the American Journal of Archaeology, for which Cole Sprouse was asked to pose for the cover.

Why are they still the butts of our jokes? Why are we not talking about comparing ourselves against such great examples of scholarship? Oh, I know why: because it’s easier to dismiss their accomplishments because they’re defenseless celebrities. Grow up.

To: The NYU Community

From: Jules Martin, Vice President of Public Safety

Re: Assault and Robbery at GCASL

Students and Faculty of New York University:

At approximately 6:30 this afternoon, a dining hall employee at Hayden Residence Hall was mugged while leaving the building on Washington Square West. The victim fought off the assailant, but suffered several stab wounds. Fortunately, he was quickly transported to a local hospital and is currently in stable condition.

The NYPD has begun investigating the incident and, with the help of campus security, already has several suspects in custody.

Although we are confident that the assailant will be brought to justice, we want to remind the NYU community of a similarly alarming incident that occurred almost 13 years ago involving a group of NYU freshmen and a young girl who escaped from the Psychiatric Ward at Bellevue Hospital. The girl terrorized the students by Washington Square Park and they have been missing ever since.

We at NYU Public Safety just want to remind you to be especially careful when walking around at night, on and off campus. Always travel with a friend and if you see something suspicious, report it. It is very important that you follow these policies.

Such policies could have prevented countless attacks, such as the one that occurred on that very same night 13 years ago when a Gallatin teaching assistant was lured into an abandoned warehouse downtown by a mysterious hooded man. According to the NYPD, the man actually turned out to be a half-dead little girl in disguise, hell-bent on avenging her and her parents' untimely death. Unfortunately, the only thing police found of the teaching assistant was his NYU ID, held tightly by a severed, blood-soaked hand.

We want to reiterate that it is imperative that you always monitor your surroundings and be on the lookout for suspicious activity. You are as much responsible for your own safety as you are for the safety of your peers.

I'd like to leave you with one last story. Ok so, one time, less than a mile away from where those other kids were murdered, a little girl named Amanda (who was supposed to be dead) was spotted trick-or-treating. This isn't fake, promise. She was undead and wreaked havoc on all the kids who ever teased her. They teased her because she was ugly and fat and smelly until she killed herself and her parents, so she took her revenge on them. Every kid who saw her and failed to recite the chant "little Amanda Nichols lives, little Amanda Nichols lives, little Amanda Nichols lives" was murdered in the way that Amanda killed herself and her parents. For real. They were killed slowly, by having their throats cut while they watched little Amanda Nichols stand in front of them smiling big and singing the song they would sing at recess when the other kids made fun of her.

I'm not making this stuff up. Here's an example of someone who saw her and didn't sing the chant: there was a girl named Jenny who didn't believe this and when she saw Amanda, ran away. A few hours later on that night, she was woken up by loud footsteps and heavy breathing, there was Amanda standing there with a huge knife and before Jenny could shout for help, she died, because Amanda sliced her neck already.

Another boy called Sam did the same thing and woke up with Amanda standing on top of his bed and when he screamed for his mom and dad they couldn't hear him because Amanda already chopped his throat up and killed him. He was dead by the time her knife got from one end of his throat to the other. Swear.

So to recap, here are a few safety rules:

1. Always be aware of your surroundings.
2. At night, walk in groups
3. Apparently, if u copy and paste this to ten comments in the next ten minutes u will have the best day of ur life tomorrow. U will either get kissed or asked out, if u break this chain u will see a little dead girl in your room tonight and then you will die like those other kids. Promise.

School of Continuing Professional Studies
CANDIDATES

Claudia Griffith, Sophomore

Affiliation: Nancy's Housewarming Party
Stat: Batted .245 in Spring Softball w/ hip flaring up
Stat: Is not a strong independent woman of color

Hello, my name is Claudia and I hope to be your student senator this year. This past year I served as Secretary of the Kiwanis society of Lynwood, Long Island and was PTA president when my second daughter Rachel was in Lynwood Elementary. I aim to create an all-inclusive NYU campus, where SCPS students won't be confused for lost tourists or janitors. I feel I am qualified, as I was the governor of New Hampshire from 2008-2012.

"Vote Claudia for Student Senator!"

Shenese Jones, Sophomore

Affiliation: No parties. That was a long time ago.
Stat: Raised two kids without no man
Stat: Is a strong independent woman of color

My name is Shenese, and although I know you think I look like just another dumb piece of ass for you to oogle at, but I will knock you down before you can whistle at me. I think I'd be a great student senator—I tell my kids to eat healthy just like Michelle Obama. I won't take any bullshit from anyone, I raised two kids on my own and I know that kind of shit when I see it and I won't let it happen.

"Dat other bitch ratchet, vote me"

Tobias "The T" Moriarty, 'Frosh'

Affiliation: Always a par-T with The T
Stat: Went to a Grateful Dead reunion concert last fall
Stat: Let's kids drink so they can learn in a healthy way

Wassup!! It's The T here, ready to rock this semester and hopefully be your student senator! I'm not sure what I wanna major in while at SCPS, but I'm definitely looking to get a few minors! Ka-Ching! I'm hoping to run so that I can work closer with my daughter Rebecca, who is also a student senator. How fuckin' dope would that be?? A dad and daughter working together! Haha, but I'd actually push for more on campus events, like an Alan Parsons Project concert!

"Let's turn the party up to 11, NYU!"

It's back and shoulders day, guys!

Stat: Jerked off together with two other guys

Stat: Hoping to be a Senator because America fucking rocks

Wassup guys, it's Brandon! First off, wanna give a shout out to my boy Tyler—sorry I cropped you out of my profile pic dude—you know I love you, Ty! I'm just a chill dude hoping to represent all the chill dudes that NYU has, I know you're out there, make yourself heard hahaha! I don't know too much about what I'd do if I got into office, but I promise you that we'd have a Passion Pit concert! Those guys are so turned up it's not even funny! Saw 'em at Bonaroo, we gotta get em here too!

Sorry I cut you out, Ty!

Jennifer Moriarty, Junior

Reason, Results, Reliability

Stat: Went to a Oxford to Study Last Fall

Stat: Hope to be Vice President someday

Hi everyone, my name is Jennifer, and I'm hoping to be your senator next semester. I've previously been dorm president, and last year I interned at an NGO, so I'm well versed in student initiatives, political etiquette, and preparing a good cup of coffee. I'm on track to double major in Business and Political Economy, with a minor in Media, Culture, and Communications. I found out my dad is running, whatever you do please don't vote for him.

Darvesh Saxena, Sophomore

Affiliation: National Democratic Alliance

Stat: Getting a Degree in Marketing

Stat: Has lots of great ideas

Hi guys it's Darvesh i hope to be your student senator it will be a good time because I am getting my degree in marketing and I have lots of great ideas. I think one cool idea for fundraising would be a kissing booth where you can kiss real girls. That would be fun. You may remember me as the kid who killed that dog that lived in Founders last year but that was an accident and I do not keep a gun in my desk anymore.

Darvesh is the DarBesht!

CANDIDATES

Adam Blasberg, Freshman

Affiliation: Shy Bladder Coalition

Stat: I've Been drinking coffee all day!

Stat: God, what's gotten into me today haha...

People say that I have shy bladder, but I just don't like to pee around other dudes, is that so weird? I just don't feel like peeing when I see, hear, smell, or touch another dude. It isn't just me dude, it's an actual condition. Look it up. Paruresis, shyness of peeing in the presence of others. When you think about it, isn't it weird that you are COMFORTABLE peeing in front of friends or strangers? That's pretty weird of YOU if you ask me.

"I can't go if you're watching!"

Connor Chinburg, 7th Grader

Affiliation: Partying, Partying, Yeah!

Stat: I DON'T have a crush on Sara!

Stat: Passed Algebra even tho Ms. Martin is mean

Hey guys, I know I'm just in 7th grade, but I have a ton of ideas for running NYU Abu Dhabi! First off, how cool would it be to have a waterslide into a giant pool of gelatin! And there's a ton of free ice cream, pizza, and most important no adults allowed! Let's make sure we invite Sara, and also expand our capacities as a Global Network University. I think tuition-driving financial aid is the future, and that we also need to have soda in all the water fountains.

"Did Sara just look over here??"

Jimmy Boyle, 6th Grader

Affiliation: Ms. Hopkins Homeroom

Stat: "Sara why you gotta be so thirsty?"

Stat: "Stay off my d Sara!"

Jimmy's the name, fucking Sara's the game. But I don't wanna play the game! I don't even LIKE her she's gross! I mean, I hit it a few times, but I don't want that to be the only thing people know about me you get it? I'm really big into student council and playing with my dog too. Plus I can do whatever I want when I'm at my Dad's house. He got me an airsoft gun, but my mom wants me to return it. She can be such a cunt sometimes.

NYU ABU DHABI CANDIDATES

Amina Luthra, Sophomore

Affiliation: Liberal

Stat: Studying Political Science, Interested In Fashion

Stat: Loves Starbucks or Oren's Coffee

Heyyyy I'm Amina, I'm a sophomore at NYU Abu Dhabi, and I'm hoping to be a student senator next fall. I love watching Netflix in my room, and there is nothing I love more than sushi. I think the biggest thing I would try to accomplish is making registering a lot easier (like, wtf why does it have to be so hard??) and then definitely making sure there are more straight and cute guys on campus. I never happen to meet any of them, except at parties in Al-brooklyn.

"Do I smell a Pumpkin Spice Latte?"

Mohammed Chinburg, Freshman

Affiliation: I am often busy at work

Stat: I haven't seen my son in a while

Stat: I do not remember my son's name

Hello everyone. My son is running for student senator and I am worried that he and I are losing touch with each other. I ask that you vote me to Student Senators so that I can get closer with him. I will donate new facilities to the school, including a pool, and a dining center that operates free for students enrolled in the university. Perhaps most importantly on my list, is replacing the water fountains on campus (as water is expensive here) with soda. I think everyone would be happy with that decision. Thanks.

"Please let me reconnect with my son"

Rob Maguire, Junior

Affiliation: The party in NYU Abu Dhabi Housing!

Stat: Hates Bob Al-Cat

Stat: Hasn't figured himself or housing market out

Hey guys, you may have seen me throughout the year dressed up as Housie Al-Arab but outside of that, I'm majoring in Real Estate Finance in Stern, and I have a ton of ideas of how to reform NYU housing to make it more convenient, affordable, and enjoyable for all students that hope to take advantage of it. There's much more to residential life (and my candidacy!) than Housie, and I hope that when you're voting, you remember that my name is spelled R-O-B, not H-O-U-S-I-E.

"My name is Rob, not Housie!"

My opponents may be pursuing degrees in Political Science and International Relations, but I'm a certified in the art of WHOOP ASS and THE BACK OF MA HAND to YOUR FACE Relations.

"mmHM I'm bout to each all yall a lesson"

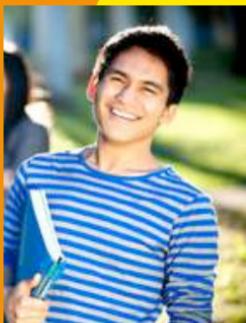

TJ Quinn, Freshman

Affiliation: Independent, between two parties

Stat: Was stuck between two buildings

Stat: Met with deans over embezzlement of Dining Dollars

You may remember me as the kid who fell between two buildings last semester, or the kid who said the n-word like 50 times while we were all watching the Reality Show. But I'm much more than that. I'm constantly active on the facebook group making puns off people's last names, and I'm also trying to rush a frat. All things considered, I'm a busy beaver, but I'm active with a bunch of student groups on campus so I think I'm a candidate well-versed in the social nuances of NYU.

"Overlook my past mistakes please!"

Resputia, Sophomore

Affiliation: None yet honey..unless you want one ;)

Stat: Rhodes Scholar

Stat: Interned for Al Gore

How YOU dern'? My name is Resputia, and I'm running for student senator this semester. I may not be the most qualified for the job, but I guarantee you that I'm the largest and most loving woman for the job. I bring a big body, and a bigger personality. Someone thinking they can throw a party without my supervision? Oh HELL no honey. That ain't the way we do business around here. I plan for more pizza parties and to help everyone follow in my comically oversized footprints.

7 Cool Older Brothers

I was scrollin' through all the cool older bro's in my phone contacts and decided to put a bomb-ass list up of the nastiest, sickest older bro's I know. You guys are crazy!

7. Dave

Dave's first on the list cuz' he's just an overall sick older bro. One time he took me and his little bro to get ice cream at 3 a.m.! He's always doin' crazy stuff like that and he's sick at Halo 2. Stay real Dave.

6. Kevin S.

Kevin is cool cuz' not only is he my best friend Jake's older bro, but he was also in a band and they played in their parents' garage real loud even when his mom told him to stop. Keep rockin' Kev. Made me wish I still had an older brother. Go Cougars!

5. Geoff

Geoff's funny cuz' his name starts with a G even though it should start with a J and me and his little bro Darren used to make fun of him for it haha. Just messin', Geoff, I love you man. You're like the older brother I used to have! Stay fre$$$$h.

4. Jason R.

Jason's gnarly cuz' he surfs! Keep rockin' those waves Jason!

3. Kyle

Kyle and my older bro used to play b-ball before my bro drove himself and his g.f. off a cliff in what authorities deemed a joint suicide. Keep ballin' Kyle!

2. G.E.D. Ethan

Ethan's crazy. One time he told his teacher to screw off and never went back to school! Another time he tried to convince Michael not to do it cuz' he had so much to live for and that our mom couldn't raise me on her own without him but he didn't listen. Ethan's nuts.

1. Zak

Zak's chill cuz' he skates and he spells his name with a K at the end. Dude that's crazy! Just kiddin', man. You're the only one who asked me how I was after my older bro pulled the sickest, but saddest trick ever. Wow, I bet everyone wishes you were their older brother. I know I do! If Michael were half the older bro you are – HALF – maybe he'd still be pullin' crazy stunts n' shit today. Zak you know you're crazy! Stay real.

To whom this may concern:

Before I start, I would first like to thank you. My wife and I been using your product since our little Tanner was born and it works every time, without a hitch. Heck, I think it's the best thing that's happened to our family since our cleaning lady Rose fessed to stealing my best white suit.

My complaint, though, is not about your product, but about your new logo. It's downright offensive to people like me. Frankly, when Beatrice came home from the store crying bout how your new logo upset her, I was this close (picture my fingers getting real close) to walking straight into your office and giving YOU something to cry about.

Now, I know your last logo had some colored folk doing this and that and that was upsetting to people too, but I don't see why that means you should go ahead and change it to hurt other people. That is, people who instead of a normal penis have a big, shiny cartoon key supported by a miniature-sized man.

How am I supposed to be a good father to my boys, all of whom suffer from the same condition I do, when your product is out there making fun of our very serious problem? A key is one thing, but to add in a tiny man - one that is identical to the one that is permanently holding up my and my sons' meat - is just plain rude.

Do you, sir, with your big, three-dimensional, New York City dick know what it feels like to ejaculate molten gold? No, you don't. Do you know what it's like to not only support a family, but also support a flat, 4-centimeter man in a suit who lives where your testicles used to be? I reckon not.

Sometimes I think, heck, that's what I get for dipping my junk into radioactive waste down at the plant. But then I remember I'm a man and real men don't back down from bets when 15 bucks and a signed Pearl Jam 2008 tour poster is on the line.

You, sir, are not a real man. I suggest you go home tonight, look your sons in the eye, and imagine a cartoon man and key in the place of you and your sons' dicks and then think about whether or not you want to keep your current logo.

I bid you adieu,

LIFE CYCLE OF THE CECROPIA SILKMOTH

Moth calms down a lot, stops holding itself to such insane high standards, generally chilling out more and just enjoying life.

Female lays rows of 2 to 6 eggs. Larvae pube development begins within the hour.

Moth mitzvah.

Larvae tries something different with its pubes.

Caterpillar finds a tech start up that is unable to attract enough investors to get off the ground.

Moth evolves into a heavy cummer, is suddenly cumming huger loads that shoot farther distances, sometimes deterring prey that try to intrude on a little private time. This is the time when the moth's brain begins to abide by the flight or cum reflex.

The larvae pupae realizes it will not emerge from its cocoon as a beautiful butterfly, but rather as a brown, flying, loud nuisance, like Jaden Smith.

From The Editor's Desk

What's up my brotherly brothers? As you all know it's pledge time, which means we have a brand new class of newbies to boss around up the wah-zou! Pledge period can be a tumultuous time for us brothers--trying to think of new things to make pledges do for us -- which is why, as the editor-in-chief of the Tri-Quarterly Brother Brothers Triquarterly, I present to you The Five Best Pledge Activities!:

5. Have the pledges organize a food drive for your local homeless shelter. Not only do you complete your yearly community service requirement, but nothing feels better than sharing the gift of non-perishable items with the hungry. They will sure be thankful when they see those boxes of pasta lining their pantries!

4. Have the pledges cook a full-course dinner for all of the brothers. Nothing says "respect" like teaching 18-year-olds the patience of hand-cutting pasta from the finest Italian dough, to feed the finest bro's you know.

3. Pair up pledges, it's time to double date! Nothing creates brotherhood like two pledges wing-manning each other with two saucy Alpha Phi girls. At the end of the night when they go in for a kiss, slap both of their faces with two fistfulls of spaghetti you nabbed from the table and stuffed into your Italian made box suitcases at the restaurant. Boo-yah!

2. Sneak into the Gamma Gamma Gamma homecoming bash and replace their jungle juice with six gallons of alfredo sauce.

They won't know what hit them when they discover they've each downed a couple of cups of Zeta Beta Theta's infamous creamy alfredo! Haha.

1. Lock a pledge in a room with two Kappa Kappa girls and don't let him out until his pasta is al dente. But hold the phone provolone--lather their bodies with a pot of steamy sexy spaghetti. After you spell your name out on their chests with the primo pasta, it's time to let loose your primo pasta. Make sure you snazzle dazzle their "rigatoni's" until you make them spaghetti-o. Remember pledges, you better use preggio if you don't want her preggio!

Well, that's all for now, brothers. Next Tri-Quarterly issue we will be exploring the five best ways to draw triangles, and the two best ways to draw quarters. May your pesto be the best-o and your penne molto bene.

Best Friends Forever,
Brad

Bleeker's Hardware

How did you hear about us?

Thank you very much for ordering hardware supplies from us here at Bleeker's Hardware! But, before you go, we just ask that you select from the options below where you heard about us. It will aid us tremendously in getting our name out there and finding out what is working. Again, thank you very much.

- Website
- Our Twitter Account
- Bus Advertisement
- Saw us in a fever dream
- From an old man who looked exactly like Malcolm McDowell
- From an exploding message
- Overheard during an orgy
- From someone during the "cool down" session after the orgy
- Saw our name spelled out in a bowl of "Reeses Puff" cereal
- Saw the porno we sponsored
- From a sexual partner of your mom's
- Went on a bender and woke up in our store

- Therapist implanted the memory of our store into your mind
- Woke up with a mysterious tattoo that read “Bleeker’s Hardware”
- In the news when we stole all that money from the rival hardware store “Mike’s Hardware”
- In the news when we defaced “Mike’s Hardware” with graffiti that said “Mike’s Hardware will give you AIDS. Come to Bleeker’s instead.”
- Were drinking so much to the point where your wife decided to leave you. She took everything: The kids, your house, and your singing novelty fish. You were left with nothing. This only caused you to drink even more to the point where you were on the streets begging for change just so you could get your fix. Until one day, a man in a black shirt with a white collar offered you shelter from the cold. But this was no ordinary man, this was a catholic priest, and you were inside a large church. And as you entered the church you looked into the face of Christ upon that cross and felt the palpable presence God. You were going to change your ways. You were never going to let temptation and addictions ruin you again. You began to attend church daily and work as a janitor there to help pay off your debt to the priest. You thank God every single day for bringing the priest into your life and saving you from yourself. And for the first time in a long time you can say that you are happy. Then while on a walk you saw one of our billboards.

Breakthrough

Patient: I can just feel it doc, this week I'm right on the brink of self-actualization.

Therapist: To be perfectly honest, the concept of self-actualization has fallen out of use in clinical psychology.

Patient: What?

Patient: Nevermind. You were saying?

Me: Anyway, as I was saying, I'm really close to enlightenment this week. Doc, I swear to Christ, I think I've solved all my problems.

Patient: That's really wonderful to hear Mr. Chodesmoke. Tell me about it.

Patient: Well, first off, I haven't had a drop to drink all week.

Therapist: Unbelievable, Mr. Chodesmoke, just absolutely fantastic. And I take it you weren't hospitalized this time around with delirium tremens?

Me: Hell no Doc, I was right as rain. I've just been smoking pot and taking klonopin instead.

Therapist: Ah, I see. Well it seems you've just...

Patient: (interrupting) And another thing doc, I'll tell you what. I think I've fixed my problems with that son of mine.

Therapist: Really astonishing, Reinhardt. How so?

Patient: Well you'll remember I was telling you how I whooped him with a crowbar last week and locked him up in the chicken coop?

Therapist: I do recall.

Patient: Well I'll be damned if I've seen him since! And boy has it been quiet around the house!

Therapist: Wow, just.. That is really tangible progress Mr. Chodesmoke, and I'm delighted to hear it.

(There is a pause. Reinhardt Chodesmoke stares off into the distance, smiling faintly)

Therapist: And how is your wife? Specifically, what you had referred to as her "sexual impotency" last week?

Patient: Well shave my ballsack, I'll be damned for forgetting to tell ya how I fixed that one!

Therapist: Do tell.

Patient: Well, so what I was talking about when I said that was how my wife doesn't seem to much like having sex with me after I've been drinking, and since I'm always drinking, I can only get a nut off in her once, maybe twice, a week. But, this last week we came to a compromise, and I didn't even know it until afterwards! I came back from Lucy's off my rocks and looking to mash some hole. So I flip her over like I always do, fuck her, and fall asleep with my dick still out. Next morning, she tells me I only dry humped her butt cheeks and nudded in my briefs! Damned if it felt any different. So now, instead of fucking her, I just hump her butt and nut in my briefs while she looks at shoes on her phone or whatever.

Therapist: Good God Mr. Chodesmoke, that's wonderful. You really have made some changes.

Patient: Just like you wrote in your book, it's not the size of the changes, it's how you feel about them. Say, you got an extra copy of that around? I'd like my wife to read it.

Therapist: Sure do.

Patient: Thanks!

(Therapist takes a copy of a large, hardcover book off the shelf entitled "It's Not the SIZE of the Changes, It's How You FEEL About Them". He writes, "To Mrs. Reinhardt Chodesmoke- It's not the size of the changes, it's how you feel about them." on the inside cover, and hands it to his patient.)

THOSE WE

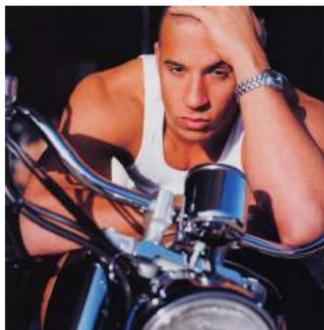

Paul Walker

America was shocked by the death of Paul Walker on November 30, 2013. Known for his role as Brian O'Connor in the Fast and the Furious movies, he was a method actor that lived life to it's fullest. He took each and every role very seriously, and died in a tragic drag race, researching for Fast and the Furious 7. What truly shocked the world, however, was his age. At 40, he totally passed for a late-20-something.

James Gandolfini

James Gandolfini, the Emmy Award-winning actor, famed for his work on the HBO drama The Sopranos as Tony Soprano, a tough-talking, hard-living crime boss with a stolid exterior but a rich interior life, died this June at age 51. He suffered a heart attack in Rome just two months before the release of the movie Enough Said. The film, co-starring Julia Louis Dreyfus, was released posthumously in September. "I mean, it's kind of been done before, you know?" said the ghost of Heath Ledger. His family refused to comment, asking for privacy in this difficult time.

Brian Griffin

At 56 dog years, Brian Griffin lived a long and happy life. To say he will be missed is an understatement. We don't know how we're going to live without you. Should've been Meg.

LOST IN 2013

Cory Monteith

30-year-old Cory Monteith was found dead in July. Monteith had a major role in the business drama Boiler Room (2000) and then got his breakthrough role as the anti-hero Riddick in the science-fiction film Pitch Black (2000). In 2004, Diesel reprised his role as Riddick in The Chronicles of Riddick, which was a box office failure considering the large budget.

Gia Allemand

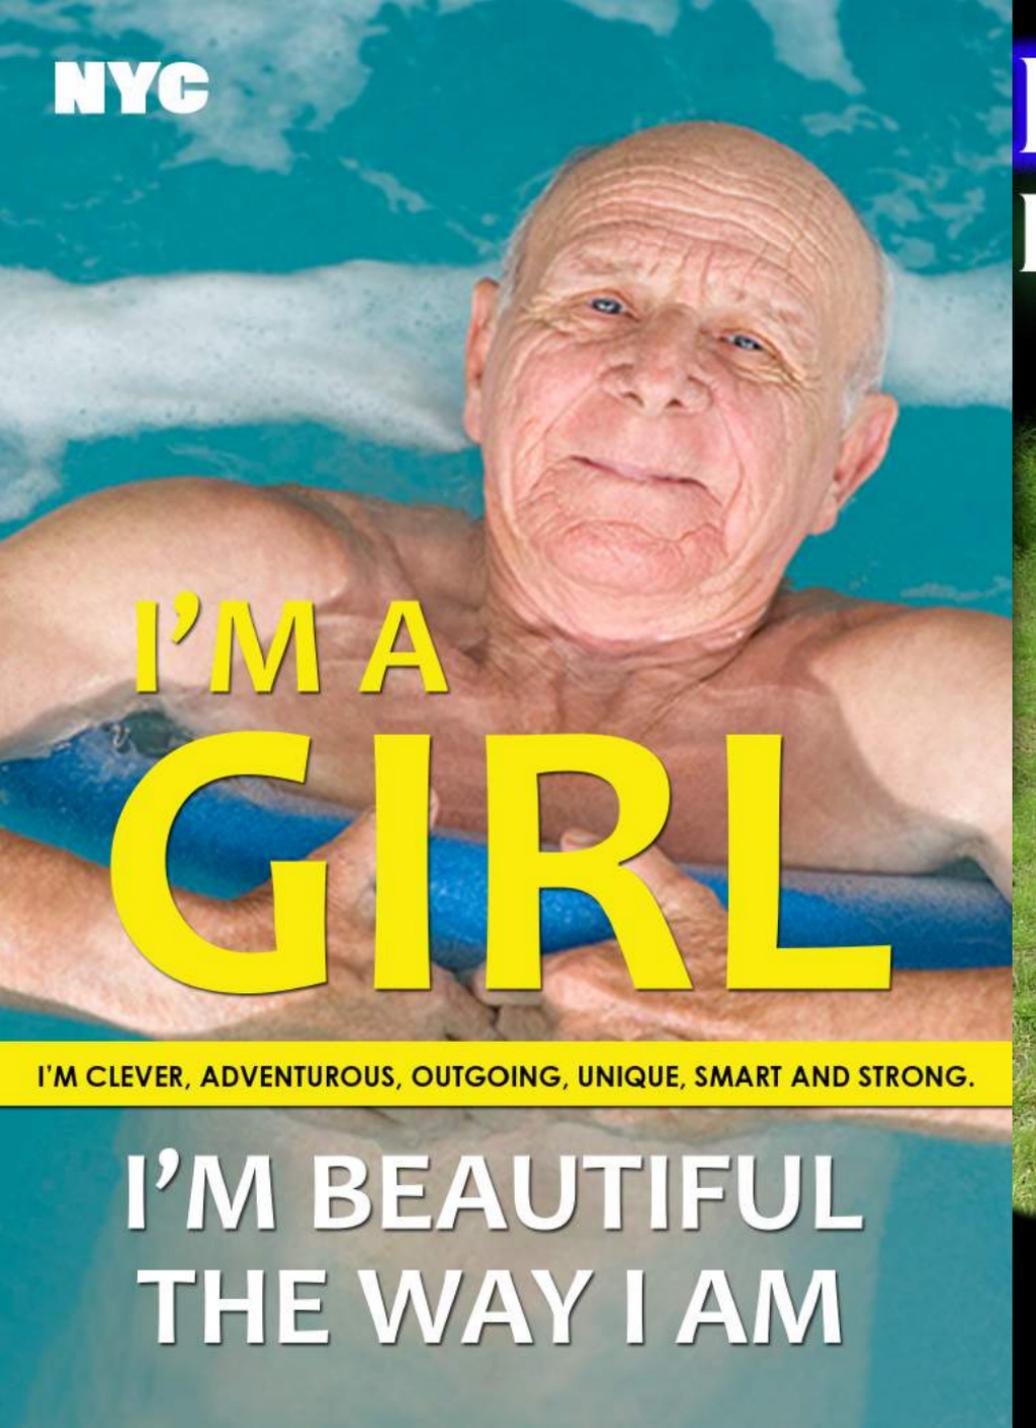

Gia Allemand was found dead in her apartment, having committed suicide. She is best remembered for being that one girl on The Bachelor. You remember. The Bachelor Pad? Yeah, the one between The Bachelor and The Bachelorette. She was also on the season with Jake. Gia, even Jake will miss you as you go travel to the other side.

Lisa Robin Kelly

The actress Lisa Robin Kelly passed away in her sleep during a stay at an alcohol treatment center. Known for her sarcastic quips as the first Laurie Forman on That 70's Show, her comedic timing is part of what made her so special. She lives on through her family, her friends, and her cast mates, though word around town is that they've been spending a lot of time with Christina Moore.

Ted and Marylyn's Trip to China 2013

This fall Teddy and I decided that we wanted to get over to China before his lasik surgery next February. Well after saving up our pennies we finally found a flight over! Teddy booked a great one—he is always so good with finding those deals!—and we got to the SF Airport in just 45 minutes. There was NO traffic on the expressway at 5:30 AM; it was unbelievable. The only problem is that we were so exhausted that we both fell asleep right as we got on the plane!! When we woke up, we fuddled our way to the exit where we found a nice young Chinaman waiting to drive us to our hotel. My first husband David used to tell me throughout the Clinton years how huge China was and boy was he right!

Teddy found a Best Western for us to stay in and we sat around and unpacked our things because my hip had been acting up. When we finally got ready to go we were very hungry so we found our way down this narrow back street to eat at Joe's Shanghai.

The waiters were not good with English. When I told one of them I had low blood sugar he just shook his head. Luckily, he caught on and brought us our receipt in English. Teddy used his USAA card which he told me switches currencies. How neat!

I think I fell in love with Chinatown; the narrow streets, the exotic smells, the negroes trying to sell me handbags. This nice black told me that because everything was made in China (and it just makes me so mad, I talked about this with Grace last week at bridge don't even get me started!) that everything was so cheap. Well I took advantage and bought Louis Vuitton bags for the whole family; my daughter, my three granddaughters, that neighbor girl who helps us garden and watch the house while we are away, David's bastard child who I still treat like my own, and of course my niece. We got seven bags (Teddy treated me to one too!) for only fifty dollars! I swear if the flights weren't so expensive I would do all of my shopping here :-)

One of the things that I loved so much about Chinatown was that they made it so easy for tourists by putting all the signs in English as well as Chinese! Our hotel was right off of Centre Street and we did most of our shopping on—and I know I am going to butcher this—but it was pronounced ‘Cohn-Al’ street. There were a lot of stores on ‘Mott’ street, as well as ‘Laf-Aye-Et’ street. My niece is going to die when she sees the pictures of all the street signs in English and Chinese.

We did so much walking that we had to stop for a bit—now Teddy’s hip was acting up, and my blood sugar was getting low again—so we went in to get tea at this modern looking place. I was a little chilly so I got what their little cute Chinese worker man said was their special, the Boba. Well I nearly had two sips before I choked myself to death! There was all this slush at the bottom of the drink and the worker wouldn’t even let me return it. Needless to say I was very disappointed. We walked back to our hotel and I got this great picture of the city street and I swear to you it's just chinese as far as you can see. I'm such a tourist!

The rest of our week was filled with small excursions like this: in and around Hong Kong Supermarket, over to get dumplings, and then with the second half of our week we were so tired we just sat and watched TV in our hotel room! With the reverb from the streets, Teddy's ears (that's what we call his hearing aids) were glaring and it was hard to hear the movie. I read Eat, Pray, Love though, and it was excellent.

I think my favorite part of all of Chinatown was that as we were leaving to the airport they had this big building that looked just like the Empire State Building—like a little New Yorktown right in the heart of the Eastern Hemisphere. How cute and quaint! Though it was nice, we are both excited to get back to our bridge routine and gardening. I'll just stick to the Beef Lo-Mein from now on if you ask me!

“Thespian” Deemed Gayest Word In The English Language

CAMBRIDGE – After great deliberation, the writers of the latest edition of the Merriam Webster Dictionary have declared ‘thespian’ the gayest word in the English language. Using an algorithm based on the amount of times a word came up on gay porn sites, Perez Hilton’s blog, and discussion boards in Cher’s online fan club, scientists were able to narrow it down to about fifty words to be carefully evaluated.

The president of the Advancement of Gay Youths Coalition initially denounced the finding, citing its homophobic implications, but eventually commented, “If you look at the list, it’s hard to argue.”

A primary decision-maker has stated, “I mean yeah, it was tough towards the end. It got pretty close, and for a while we thought it might have been ‘equestrian’ or ‘feathered’ but in the end, we all knew what it was going to be.” Our source has chosen to remain anonymous.

Released exclusively for Plague readers, here is the 2013 Gayest Words List:

STUDY: 75% of North Korea's "Science & Technology" Budget Goes Toward Choking Kim Jong-un While He Masturbates

PYONGYANG - In the wake of more nuclear testing, experts have worried about what else might be going on in North Korea's top-secret "Science & Technology" department. After years of investigation, intelligence agencies in South Korea claim to have an answer: erotic asphyxiation. And lots of it.

Since coming into power last year, the young Kim has been diverting much of his country's budget toward the construction of an elaborate network of underground tunnels, all built for masturbatory purposes. According to experts, being choked while he masturbates carries great symbolic importance to the young leader. Kim claims that the act represents his country's history - a history of victory in the face of the ubiquitous "capitalist chokehold." Others, however, claim that autoerotic asphyxiation is just one of the many strange practices that Kim was introduced to during his days on the Danish nightclub circuit in the mid-90s.

According to intercepted intelligence, a team of highly trusted technicians has been using every resource at their disposal to choke their Supreme Leader while he pleasures himself. Some of Kim's favorite aids are said to be dental floss, jump rope, painter's tape, and a custom-engineered mesh line with the codename "Spiderman's web."

Though some have criticized Kim for spending billions on this hobby while the majority of his population starves, other experts predict that this information about his private life will help boost Kim's "everyman appeal" with the average global citizen. While global leaders continue to condemn his human rights record, the rest of the world can now feel reassured that the young Kim is just an ordinary guy who isn't too snobby for the occasional blue-faced orgasm.

Supreme Court Bans Clarence Thomas From Airing Out His Feet During Hearings

WASHINGTON—In a landmark decision Thursday the Supreme Court voted 8 to 1 in favor of banning Justice Clarence Thomas from removing his shoes and exposing his bare feet in the middle of hearings.

The decision, written by Chief Justice John Roberts Jr., stated that "It is so ordered that the presence of Clarence Thomas's unshathed feet in an enclosed area such as this court room is unconstitutional on the grounds it is disgusting."

"We find the odor is offensive and hinders the judicial process in that we can't concentrate on anything because, Christ, that smell is so strong. We acknowledge that Justice Thomas has a foot disorder that requires letting his "pups" breathe, but we hold that not barfing our brains out from the grossness takes priority."

Roberts was supported strongly by Justices Sotomayer, Breyer, Alito, and Kagan all of whom sit in close proximity to Thomas or have especially sensitive noses. A concurring opinion was written by Justice Scalia stating that his objection to Thomas's feet was not the smell, but rather their unaesthetic appearance.

"While Justice Thomas's feet are undoubtedly odorous, the most offensive aspect is their unsightly appearance that include long nails and dry heels. The unappealing image of his feet are accentuated by the Justice's habit of placing his feet on his desk which allegedly increases circulation to the Justice's lower extremities. Man, cut your nails, Clarence."

Justice Thomas stated that he accepted the court's decision and intended to try out a variety of topical creams.
