Ever since I was in fifth grade I've wanted to draw a perfect geometric 'S'. It was like everyone else around me could do it - except for myself when I saw my friend Ian doodling in his notebook - drawing thousands and thousands of perfect, beautiful S's. I kept thinking to myself 'he's probably going to be really good at sports'. Then in sixth grade, Ian wasn't even my friend anymore. He joined the football team. I joined the string orchestra. No one in string orchestra can draw a fucking S. But now now I can. It's my senior year at high school, and boy, Ian do I have a surprise for you. Behold: a perfect, geometric 'S'.
BTW: fuck you, Ian. See you in Hell!

A Brief Note From The Editors

What you must understand, Dear Reader, is that producing this issue nearly killed us. We mean that in a literal sense. We decided that the only way to authentically create a yearbook-themed issue was to open up a school ourselves. As public schools grads, it was vital we open up a public school, which meant we had to build a legal township from the ground up. Thanks to Manifest Destiny, the only land left to build our humble village was on a piece of land so cursed that no human dared to lay claim to it. Our doe-eyed naiveté got the best of us and we broke ground. Almost instantaneously, an apocalypse of curses started raining down upon us; a plague of locusts rampaged our worksite; our water turned to blood; our newly settled citizens were covered in boils; an outbreak of lice ran through Plague High. But not even all the evil spirits in all of Hell could keep us from producing an issue. Our school flourished and our students thrived in all spheres. We hope that Plague High continues long beyond this issue, but now it is up to you to be the caretaker of our magnificent institution. Seriously, by reading this issue you have accepted full legal, financial, and psychological responsibilities for Plague High School.

No Take-Backs!

Sincerely,
THE PLAGUE.

PLAGUE HIGH AEGRUS

It is my pleasure as Principal of Plague High to reflect on another whirlwind year at our school.

Unfortunately, things got off to a rocky start with the bloody student council coup, and, in a shocking turn of events, our gym teacher resigned due to children touching him inappropriately.

However, great change also came to the school. Our amazing janitorial team finally vanquished the Roach King, we successfully invaded and annexed the Arby's next door (new cafeteria, kiddos!), and we implemented our long-awaited "Top Gun: Maverick Initiative", which equipped all teachers with a P-51 Mustang, the same fighter plane owned by Plague High alumnus Tom Cruise! Field trips are gonna be a breeze!

In the spring, it warmed my heart to see our community come together to support our Cars 2 Is a Documentary Club as they took their case to the Supreme Court (and won). Our mud-wrestling team also won Nationals this year for the 26th time in a row, displaying what Wet and Sloppy Little Boys Magazine called "a disturbing willingness to target the butthole" and "an unparalleled consumption of mud".

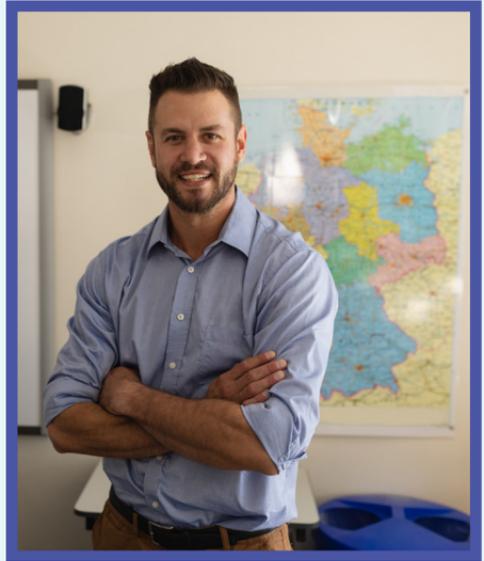

It is my distinct pleasure to lead the only student body entirely composed of film majors, and I am proud of our distinguished alumni including the Unabomber, at least three Brazilian ex-Presidents, and the inventor of queefing. I can't wait to see where your young minds take you.

Wishing all a wonderful summer,
Principal Ben Dover

P.S. You may have noticed a lack of mention of "The Incident" in my letter. Please note this was a deliberate decision on my part.

PROFILE ON SEÑOR PARKER

If there's one thing you should know about Señor Parker, it's that he's not addicted to BLACK TAR HEROIN—at least not anymore.

"I'd actually prefer if you kept that off the record," Parker said when I sat down to meet with him after 5th period Spanish, which he teaches with the kind of frantic energy that only someone who used to do BLACK TAR HEROIN could.

"It's not what defines me, and it's just something that I would really prefer people didn't know about."

Parker, evidently, is no stranger to lying, a characteristic shared among many of those who are also addicted to BLACK TAR HEROIN. Although he purports to no longer use, I, as a student of his Spanish class, can attest that he brings a sort of BLACK TAR HEROIN vibe to his teaching style, proven by his propensity to give me Fs on my exams, which isn't even a letter in Spanish I'm pretty sure.

"I have no idea what you're talking about," said sophomore Anthony Vo when asked if he agreed with my assessment.

“What does it even mean to have a BLACK TAR HEROIN vibe?”

It stands to reason that Vo would answer this way. After all, multiple sources tell me that his parents’ recent divorce was his fault, so it makes sense that his brain would be stupid and small and addled.

Still, Señor Parker strives as best he can to make learning Spanish fun, though he sometimes refuses to indulge the curious minds of his students.

“Why do you want to know that?” he demanded when I asked, “¿Como se dice ‘BLACK TAR HEROIN’ en español?”

No matter how much I pushed to get him to answer, Parker would not budge—but he eventually did seem far more receptive once he felt the cold metal of my 9mm barrel pressed against the base of his neck.

“I’d be dead before I hit the floor,” he whimpered when I asked him if he knew what would happen if I pulled the trigger.

“Say that in Spanish,” I whispered, “or else I’ll sever vertebrae C1 through 7.”

One of Parker’s greatest aspects as a teacher, endearing him to generations of his students, is his willingness to show emotion. Tears sprang to his eyes as he said, “Estaría muerto antes de golpear el suelo.”

“Good,” I crooned, stroking his hair as he did what Spanish teachers did best and taught me how to say, “I’m nothing more than a pathetic heap of bones and sinew who’s addicted to BLACK TAR HEROIN” in Spanish and promised that he’d never give me an efe on my examenés ever again.

MEET CLUB.

We are Plague's High School Premiere Meet Club. This year, we actually planned out all our meetings for the following quarter before our latest meeting deadline. We held a meeting discussing not holding an excessive amount of meetings, about which meetings could be emails, a meeting with Elvis's ghost where he tried unsuccessfully to kill us and take our bodies, a meeting about paper, a meeting with therapists to discuss some of our more self-destructive habits such as having too many meetings instead of eating.

Meetings will consist of discussing plans for our meetings, updating when we have the time our meeting, making wishlists about future meeting content, such as discussing meetings. Such meetings include but are not limited to executive meetings, board meetings, 1 on 1 meetings, Zoom meetings, meet cutes, fated meeting of star crossed lovers, median meetings, medium meetings, first dates, and HR meetings. We are looking for someone to take meeting minutes, duties include listening to and participating in meetings, as well as getting to know the concept of time(meeting minutes). Please do not confuse our club with clubs that involve reading, breeding, bleeding, kneading, feeding, treating, leading.

Join The Cars 2 Is A Documentary Club!

This grounded and logic-based club, which meets on Thursday mornings, is full of completely normal students who know the truth: Cars 2 is a documentary.

Our reasons for thinking this:

#1: We have never seen the actor Michael Caine in real life, and we have seen the character Finn McMissile in the movie theater ergo, Michael Caine is not real and Finn McMissile is and Michale Caine was just invented as a lie to maintain McMissile's cover while working as a spy!!!!!!

#2: Cars 2 was not nominated for any oscars. This is because the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were probably all confused, like, "wait a minute? Is this an animated feature or a documentary or a best picture?" They decided to simply neglect giving it any nominations whatsoever. Big mistake. BIG mistake. BIIIIIGGGG MISTAKE.

#3: Four weeks ago, one of our members changed the Cars 2 Wikipedia article to say that it was a documentary and it took almost four hours for someone else to change it back.

Therefore, hope is on the horizon! There are others, like us, who know that Cars 2 is a documentary and saw it and decided to keep it! This club at PHS will light the spark that will ignite the worlddddd

If you would like to join the Cars 2 Is A Documentary Club, please speak to Mr. Harrison in room 420 (cheap laugh) during lunch period.

OP-ED: PLAGUEVILLE

It has been an incredible experience growing up in Plagueville, U.S.A. for the past 18 years. It truly is a magical place. I have zero complaints about it. Except for maybe that one time when that guy Jeremiah T. Eggplant robbed me of all my money on my way to the arcade. That wasn't fun. But other than that, it has been an incredible experience.

I remember one time when I was gallivanting across Plague Park in downtown Plagueville. It was, simply put, a religious experience. Just me, the birds chirping in the open sky, the wind gently tickling the dewy grass, and, oh wait, Jeremiah T. Eggplant was there too. "Gimme all your money, little boy!" He shouted at me. I was forced to oblige lest he use his slingshot to overpower me.

But other than that, living here has been an incredible experience. I remember once in my youth I opened up a little lemonade stand on my street corner. I made a big sign on a piece of poster board advertising the costs, I made the lemonade from scratch from a lemon tree in my yard!

It was a perfect day.

OP-ED: PLAGUEVILLE

Or so I thought. "Gimme all your money, little boy!" shouted a voice. Only it wasn't Jeremiah T. Eggplant. It was his twin brother, Jedidiah T. Eggplant! "How many of you are there?" I asked, incredulously, as Jedidiah T. Eggplant chugged my lemonade, stole all my money, and kicked my stand into the street, just for laughs.

Even still, I genuinely believe that Plagueville is one of the greatest little towns left in the world. It's idyllic, charming, and small. One time, about a year ago, I went fishing at Plague Pond. In this busy life, it's important to spend some time in nature whenever you can spare a moment. I had only been fishing for a few minutes when I felt a tugging on my line.

My heels dug into the river bank as my line heaved. How big was this fish, I asked myself. I tugged and tugged, using all my might to unearth this gargantuan beast.

But I was shocked at what I had brought up from beneath the surface of the water: "Gimme all your money, little boy!" shouted Jeremiah T. Eggplant, his mouth around the bait at the end of my line. And this time he not only took all my money, but my fishing rod, too (though, in his defense, this is likely because it was lodged in his left cheek).

Even still, Plagueville is the most charming – oh, forget it! Plagueville sucks! Anytime something good happens, you end up crossing paths with Jeremiah T. Eggplant, or if not him, his twin brother Jedidiah T. Eggplant. It's a horrible place. Don't live here. If you do live here, move away! I can't wait to go to college next year.

HOW TO LIE TO YOUR PARENTS (IN SEVEN EASY STEPS)

STEP 1

Come up with the lie; it is best if the lie is as specific as possible (for example: instead of saying “I’m going to the library with my friend to get a book,” say: “I am venturing to our local public library to retrieve The World Book Encyclopedia, Volume 5, with my friend of five years

STEP 2

Tell the lie to your parents; it is best if you say it while staring up at the ceiling so they can’t see that your pupils are dilating

STEP 3

Do the lie; this is the tricky part where you need to remember to actually go to the party at Tommy’s house and not accidentally go to the library to retrieve The World Book Encyclopedia, Volume 5, with my friend of five years named Vincenzo Ferrari he’s Italian,” because Vincenzo isn’t real

STEP 4

Be sad because Vincenzo isn't real; realize that you spent so much time focusing on the lie to make it convincing that it felt real and you created false memories and now you are mourning a friend that was never even real to begin with

STEP 5

Go to Tommy's party and get drunk so you forget about how you're mourning your friend of five years named Vincenzo Ferrari who was never even real in the first place

STEP 6

Return home and cry to your parents about how you're mourning the life of your friend of five years named Vincenzo Ferrari who was never even real to begin with because he was just created to make the lie you were going to the library more believable because you were actually going to Tommy's party

STEP 7

Accept punishment for lying to your parents; at least you are still alive, unlike your friend of five years, Vincenzo Ferrari

Course Syllabus: Family Guy 101

This course is an introduction to the deep and layered subject of family guy. It is intended for freshmen and the occasional sophomore who was unable to pass their GATS(Griffin Aptitude tests).

Throughout the year we will introduce foundational concepts such as Stewie, The Drunken Clam, The History of Quahog and more. Students are expected to participate with their best impression of a Family Guy character in class discussions (Brian is acceptable) and promote a larger sense of Family,

Topics Covered:

- Peter and Lois's marital strife
- Stewie
- The Quagmire Paradox
- Whether or not Seth MacFarlane is a domestic terrorist
- The Family Guy/American Dad!/Cleveland Show Extended Universe

Assignments

Assignment 1: Research One Griffin Extensively, justify why they are a necessary member of our favorite tv family

Assignment 2: Propose a new recurring character for family guy, such as “Mr Alfonso, the pervy but also weirdly intelligent gymnast”

Assignment 3: act out an entire episode of family guy except for the really really bigoted ones
